

Ready, Willing and Able

BUILDING INCLUSIVE BUSINESSES

Across Canada

Ready, Willing and Able (RWA) is a national program active in 30 primary communities across every province and territory.

RWA is an entirely free service for employers. We work with Canadian businesses to build their capacity as inclusive workplaces, helping them tap into the skills and potential of people on the autism spectrum or with an intellectual disability.

We provide coordinated access to a talented and skilled labour pool that is ready, willing, and able, as well as connect you with resources you can use to build a more inclusive workplace culture.

Whether your business is just starting on the path towards inclusivity or looking to improve an already diverse workplace, RWA can help you address the skills and labor needs of your business.

To learn more about the services and supports available for employers through RWA, see the business case, testimonials from a variety of our employer partners, and access resources visit us at readywillingable.ca. Or contact your local Labour Market Facilitator, Tracy Briand, at tbriand@autismns.ca.
